THE CENSUS.

Every 10 years, the federal government attempts to count every person living in the country for the U.S. Census. However, certain populations are inevitably undercounted, meaning less people fill out the Census than there actually are in a community. Transgender and queer people, LGB people, people of color, immigrants, people who are experiencing homelessness, people with low incomes, single-parent households, and young children are overwhelmingly undercounted in the Census.

The Census results directly affect issues of democracy and determine funding of social services for each state, including Medicaid, Section 8 housing vouchers and the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP).

It's on us to be counted. Being counted means being heard - it means having our needs met.
